Access to Meds and Final TPP Text

Peter Maybarduk directs Public Citizen's access to medicines and knowledge economy group, which helps partners around the world overcome high-price pharmaceutical monopolies and secure the benefits of science, technology and culture for all. Maybarduk is an intellectual property expert and presently a visiting fellow with the Information Society Program at Yale Law School. Maybarduk's work has yielded HIV/AIDS medicine price reductions, new state access to medicines policies and global shifts toward anti-counterfeiting policies that safeguard generic competition. His analysis and advocacy have been instrumental in developing widespread opposition to harmful measures in the proposed Trans-Pacific Partnership.

TPP/TTIP v Public Health Systems

Elizabeth Wiley is a senior resident at the University of Maryland in Baltimore. She is a graduate of the George Washington University School of Medicine and University of Michigan Law School & School of Public Health as well as a Teach for America and Fulbright alum. Dr. Wiley currently serves as Deputy Chair of the World Medical Association's Junior Doctors Network and is a past president of the American Medical Student Association. In these roles and as a clinician, she has been involved in TPP/TTIP advocacy over the last few years and is passionate about working to ensure trade agreements do not undermine public health and access to health care.
